Everything You Need to Know About NGH Teleseminars

For all of you who have participated in the NGH teleseminars before, you know how amazing they are. But if you are new to the teleseminars, you are in for an incredible learning and growth experience. And it is always amazing (and puzzling) to run across an NGH member who does not take advantage of the learning opportunity the teleseminars provide.

The NGH teleseminars enable you, from the convenience of any phone, to dial in, and become a part of a live conversation with many of the experts who will be leading seminars and workshops during the 2008 NGH convention.

Once known as conference calls, teleseminars today are conducted over bridge lines. You can be part of the call from anywhere you have access to a telephone; you don't even need an internet connection.

Because individual comfort levels vary with different learning formats, you may gain the most from the teleseminars as a participant who listens but chooses not to become involved in the open question and answer portions of the call. Or, you may have lots of questions and comments and be eager to speak up. Either way—its okay!

Be prepared to take lots of notes. Every NGH teleseminar means a surfeit of information. To back up your note taking, most of the calls will also be recorded as audio files, typically available for download, two to three days after a call.

When you attend an NGH teleseminar, you will also earn NGH CEU's. If you phone in, you will learn what link to visit to receive your CEU's. If you are listening to a teleseminar replay, you will find a link for your CEU's on the replay page. You will receive two hours of continuing education credit for each teleseminar you attend.

Larry Garrett talks about the 2008 NGH Convention...

Be sure you watch this video prepared by Larry Garrett. He has been attending the NGH Convention since 1990. In this video, he sits down and chats about exactly what to expect from the NGH Convention, what it has meant to him, and why it is always on his schedule to attend!
